

Enzo Silon Surin

150 Words

Enzo Silon Surin is a Haitian-born award-winning poet, author, educator, speaker, publisher, and social advocate. He has taught, performed, and lectured at schools, universities, festivals, and various other venues and serves as a keynote speaker on topics such as social justice, mental health reform, the immigrant experience, and racial disparities in America. He has been recognized for his artistry and literary citizenship and has dedicated his life and career to affecting social change through creative and critical writing.

He is the author of four collections of poetry, including American Scapegoat (Black Lawrence Press, 2023) and When My Body Was A Clinched Fist (2020), winner of the 21st Annual Massachusetts Book Awards. He is also co-editor of Where We Stand: Poems of Black Resilience (Cherry Castle Publishing, 2022), Publisher at Central Square Press, and Founder/Executive Director at the Faraday Publishing Company, a nonprofit literary services and social advocacy organization.